

Sacramento Passes Bills Curbing Campus Unrest

All too often these days the center of attention has merely been the campus skirmishes taking place throughout the state. However, what lurks in the background as a potentially more serious matter for the university community arises not out of Berkeley, but out of Sacramento.

Last week the State Senate passed by an overwhelming vote the first two of a series of bills aimed at "curbing violence" on State College and University of California campuses. Both measures, introduced by Senator Donald Grunsky (R-Watsonville), will go to the Assembly, where passage is also likely.

One bill, passed by a vote of 31 to 5, authorizes college and university administrators to bar from their campuses "known troublemakers" and persons they believe "may threaten the orderly operation of the campus."

The only opposition to these measures came from Senator Marvyn Dymally (D-Los Angeles) who said he planned to vote against "all of these hysterical bills."

Dymally, a Negro, pointed out that the Legislature this year has been flooded with bills designed to crack down on those who protest against the present educational system. "But I have not as yet seen any proposals by the authors of this hysterical legislation which would broaden educational opportunities in California," he said.

Grunsky, who sponsored the bills, said that legislation was needed to permit administrators to bar troublemakers from their campuses before they can act to cause more trouble. He saw his bills as being aimed primarily at "riot leaders who travel from campus to campus leading violent activity."

Specifically, the bill would make it a misdemeanor for a person barred from a campus to remain on the campus or return to it.

The bill would, in effect, give the administrators the authority to decide who did or did not constitute a "clear and present danger" to the campus.

The flood of bills aimed at campus dissidents has been largely a result of statements made by Governor Reagan, who has repeatedly urged that stiff measures be enacted. Many persons have accused the governor of being politically motivated in his action.

Former Governor Edmund Brown said last week that Reagan's handling of the higher education troubles in California have boosted his popularity and made a difficult man for the Democrats to beat in 1970. "The inadequacies of his administration are completely smothered by his stand against violence." "It's pure unadulterated bunk to pass all those laws," said Brown. "There are enough laws on the book to take care of any campus crisis."

This year some 65 bills have been introduced that aim at cracking down on campus violence.

RCG Considers Changes for Free Speech Area

Jeff Benjamin, a Revelle Senator to the AS, presented a proposed change in campus policy regarding distribution and sales of commercial literature. One of the amendments will not prohibit hawking as opposed to shouting or accosting in the Free Speech Plaza: salesmen may wander through the plaza like peanut vendors at a ball game and shall not inconvenience individuals by verbal harassment or physical interference.

The Free Speech Board recommended and had carried a point

6 to the present regulations: "All requests for exception to the stated policy must be submitted in writing, except in cases where it is clearly impossible to do so, 24 hours in advance." It is clearly impossible when, for instance, the need for amplification equipment has arisen in a short time.

Fluxus gave a short description of their afternoon parade.

The Nieburger Resolution, a recommendation of the formation of a campus-wide Committee on Student Conduct, was passed and will be communicated to Muir College.

Dr. Stroll's resolution with specific reference to the Marine recruitment incident was not carried.

The body planned a meeting to work exclusively on the constitution.

Professors Hold 'Work Strike', Meet to Discuss Scientists' Role

Hundreds of the nation's university professors, researchers, and students cut classes and work Tuesday to discuss the scientists' role in military-related research.

This "work strike" was in conjunction with the national convention of physicists held last week in New York, where two organizations from major campuses urged both natural and physical scientists to re-examine their profession regarding its social usefulness. They call for a general work stoppage of all scientific research for last Tuesday, March 4.

To dramatize the new awareness in the sciences, a Science Action Coordinating Committee planned these research stoppages at schools around the country. The work strike was called, not against the schools where research is carried out, but instead, "to encourage scientists and engineers to scrutinize political and moral considerations before working on research financed by the military," and to point out the shortage of non-military research opportunities.

On the UCSD campus, only two incidents were found related to this work stoppage. In the psychology department, Dr. Roland Whilelmy changed his regular class program to discuss social psychology and the sciences, relating his field to the morality of science today.

Also in concern over this new social awareness, a film was shown Tuesday evening at Scripps Institute of Oceanography covering the anti-ballistic missile program. This program is a prime example of what the work revolt is all about.

At Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where the movement began, a faculty group, The Union of Concerned Scientists called the affair "a symbolic protest directed at the military's use of university research."

A spokesman for the March 4 stoppage group at Yale University said the day was planned to "critically examine the dangers of corrupting scientific research."

A spokesman for the March 4 stoppage group at Yale University said the day was planned to critically examine the dangers of corrupting scientific research.

At the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia, all undergraduate classes were suspended to permit discussions of a broader range of subjects. About 18,000 students were affected.

"We felt if we remained narrow ... we would be speaking only to a small group of people of the same opinion," commented the organizer of the program there.

On the West Coast, students and scientists participated in programs at Stanford, UC Berkeley, UC Medical Center in San Francisco, and San Francisco State.

In many universities, the students and faculty observed a "Day of Concern" but no work stoppage was reported.

March 4 may signify the biggest single act of social awareness in the science since Dr. Robert Oppenheimer and others in the late 40's tried to alert the government about their own invention, the nuclear bomb. "But," one physicist added, "it'll be a long time before we get all the scientists out of the labs and into the streets."

CPE Needs Support, Faces Difficulties

The Center for Participatory Education has run into some difficulties in both financial and personnel matters. We established the Center as a place of reference for student-initiated courses. The deadline for normally initiated courses came three short weeks into this quarter, so any other courses offered had to go through other channels.

The course on "Critical Analysis of the University," originally hoped to be offered Spring 1969, has been found by the students and faculty members setting the course up to be a monstrous undertaking, and the plan is now a three quarter sequence of courses dealing with the historical development of the university, educational concepts, free universities, financing the university, etc. It is hoped that this sequence may be considered for a Social Science Sequence, or fulfilling half of the Revelle College non-contiguous minor requirement.

The course on Ethics and Technology quickly ran into difficulty because of a general lack of knowledge and literature in this field.

CPE is interested in initiating more courses, but we can't do the foot-work. If you have the time and the inclination to try to set up a class, we can offer assistance in finding an interested faculty member, office materials, and registrar information.

CPE would also like to put out a faculty evaluation handbook. For this we need someone with time and knowledge of computer programming.

Our other areas of interest include setting up a group registration policy for students who think that the intensity of communication generated by friends in recitations would be of benefit in making what they learn more meaningful on a day-to-day basis and promoting project majors and minors so that students can spend more time in self-rewarding independent study.

But to promote these programs, we need both support and advice. We welcome any letters from grad, undergrads, faculty and administration members. We also have brief meetings at 8:30 p.m. on Wednesdays, which, if you are interested in are interested in helping out or starting a new course (199's and 198's can still be arranged), we would be glad to have you attend.

Pensive faces articulating fear
Visions of modern history seen through a tear

Morbid rich faces waging holy war
To tie reason to the intuitive passion that makes a man

A Mild Revolution of Sorts

"Hello" I said
"How are you?" I heard
"Fine" I said
Just then my face stepped down to reveal the naked brain that lies behind.
"FINE?" I heard; and footsteps that were leaving one the run, I heard
My face was in the grass at my feet.
"Listen" I said "What is the meaning of this?"
It was queer, I admit, to see my face
lieing in the grass there and smiling and talking. He spoke.
"I am tired of this" I heard
"Of what?" I said
"This game" I heard him say
"What game?" I said
"You tell a lie and I have to cover it"
I heard "You lie inside and pull the reins and I am forced to dance a different tune"
I was afraid, without him to hide behind and I thought "I must win him back".
"I will do what ever it is that you wantme to"
I said
He only smiled at me lieing there in the grass
"You are naked now, as I am." I heard
"Yes" I said
"You can't lie to me now" I heard
I could say nothing
So I left him there in the grass and for two days and two long nights
I lived without him
I did return though, and he was asleep and I touched him on the cheek and he woke and he said "OH It's you"
"I have learned what you meant" I said
"I will never lie, never" I said
And he looked at me a long looktto see if I had lied and he could see I had not
And Ie said "I missed you in the morning when I shaved"
And I heard him say "I missed you too"
And he crawled back across the hole he had left by his leaving and reached his long fingers back around my brain and secured himself there.

 would like to make you think differently.

If Hollywood doesn't scout the Azusa basketball team, they are missing one of the finest crop of actors around. To say they deserved an Oscar would be understating the point.

The looks of anguish, the cries of agony, the sinking to the knees in pain were all so realistic, except that no one had touched these fine players.

The refs, though, felt completed, because they had provided excellent entertainment for the crowd, to award foul shots for a job well done. But then, the game did take place in Los Angeles, at best, a very unusual city.

By all rights, we should have won the game. It was a clear cut case of good versus evil. Azusa brought down a band that was somewhere between a bunch of gypsies, Tiny Tim, and Moby Grape. Their featured instrument was a set of tympanies, which made your ears decide to close up for the night and go home.

The team itself came out wearing high top black tennis shoes. Imagine-how gauche. And they had this center who looked like a cross between Magilla the Gorilla, and Goldie Hawn. But the kid could score, although that's not saying a lot. He was shooting downhill, he was so tall.

All in all, the game joins the list of "What Happened?", along with the colonists winning the Revolution, the Indians beating Custer, and Truman beating Dewey. Nevertheless, the UCSD basketball team had a great year, and gave a great effort on the court. In the second half Monday night, they finished the season looking like the champions they are.

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR STUDENTS and businessmen to discuss business careers in an informal atmosphere will be presented by the Marketing Information Day (MID) at San Diego State. It will be held on March 13 from 10:00 to 2:00 p.m. at the Aztec Center in Montezuma Hall (Student Union). Eighty to 90 companies will be represented.

UCSD'S "FIESTA DE LA GENTE" is now being planned by the AS. It is scheduled for May 23 and 24, and its purpose is to provide entertainment for the students. It is also intended to bring the community to UCSD in conjunction with San Diego's 200th anniversary.

Friday night, May 23, there will be a huge bonfire--the burning of "Old Man Prejudice", followed by a dance in Revelle Plaza, with music by a rock band.

Saturday, from 11:00 to 1:00 pm there will be a university open house, and tours of the campus. The festivities in the plaza begin at 1:00 pm. The Ballet Folklorico from Tecate will precede the Carnival, which will include game and food booths as well as cultural exhibits.

Oscar Amescua and his Mariachis will be strolling the plaza all afternoon, and there will be a pinata breaking at 3:00 pm.

Estudiantina de la Paz will perform at 3:15 pm--they are a children's singing and dancing group from Tijuana. Later that evening, the Baja Marimba Band will give a concert in the gym.

Student participation is vital to the success of the Fiesta. We need girls as hostesses, and tour guides. The Fiesta also provides an opportunity for students who would like to display any art work, photography or musical talent.

Please contact Student Activities Office, 250 MC, for further information. Jon Collins is the chairman of the committee which is planning the Fiesta, and can be reached at 755-8064.
