Brush Fire Sweeps Through UC-Owned Skeleton Canyon

By RANDY DOTINGA

Senior Staff Writer

A brush fire blackened approximately six acres of a UCSD-owned canyon south of campus on Thursday.

The fire in Skeleton Canyon, located west of Allen Field on Torrey Pines Road, was reported to the San Diego Fire Department at 12:19 p.m. Thursday.

The point of origin of the fire was the "southwest corner of the canyon. It basically moved up the canyon because of the southwest-erly or southern wind," Third Battalion Chief Bob Roppe said. He added that the wind was a "moderate" 10-15 miles per hour, with gusts of 20-25 miles per hour.

The fire department responded with 15 groups of firefighters and equipment, Roppe said. The specialized groups included both a brush fire strike team and a structural fire strike team, each consisting of five pumpers, Roppe said. He added that about 60 firefighters were present.

Although the fire came within 100 to 150 feet of houses on Bordeaux Street, there was no damage done to any structures, SDFD Public Information Officer Larry Stewart said.

He added that the firefighters' efforts were hampered by "steep terrain and brush that had not been burned for years."

Roppe said flames went 20-30 feet high, noting that the heavy brush fueling the fire made it "intensely hot." The fire was contained at 1:15 p.m., Roppe said.

John Buono, a detective with the Metro Arson Strike Team, said the fire did not appear to be deliberately set. Instead, Buono said, the fire was likely caused by "a cooking fire in one of the many 'houses' that are constructed down in the canyon area. We feel that it was probably started by a transient who was living in the canyon."

Judith Wesling, director of the La Jolla Soccer League, which plays at Allen Field, said she had recently seen signs of people living in the canyon.

"They made a brush canopy on their little campsite," she said.

According to Tom Collins, associate director for administration at Scripps Institute of Oceanography (SIO), the canyon is part of the original Scripps land acquired in 1907, and is a native plant reserve.

Associate Director of SIO

George Shor said the fire "burned a fair-sized patch of an area that we have set as an ecological study area" of natural brush land.

Shor said that although the canyon area consists of a group of coastal chaparral vegetation which is becoming rarer, the fire was "not a disaster."

"It is not an unknown thing," Shor said, "for brush areas to burn over. My suspicion is, that with a fast-burning fire like that, there will be a lot of the [plants] sprouting right back up, and within a few years it will look just the way it did before, except the brush won't be as high."

Shor added that "it is a real problem to have. . . houses built right next to a natural reserve area, [because] if one is going to retain the native wildflowers and vegetation, then one can't clean out the 'weeds and brush,' because that's the same thing.

"As the natural vegetation grows, it gets dense, tinder-dry, and eventually burns. . . so you build fire breaks. That's all you can do," he continued.

He added that, although a road is to be built in the next year near the canyon, bringing fire hydrants closer to it, this will not solve the "long-range problem" of the possibility of brush fires in the canyon.

"It's an internal contradiction. If you want to keep natural vegetation in an urban area, you can't win," because one must either cut the brush, thus destroying the native plant life, or face the risk of brush fire, he said.

As to reports of people living in the canyon recently, Collins said, "in the course of our work in that area we have found evidence of people living there."

SDSU Paper Ad Policy Revised

By RANDY DOTINGA

Senior Staff Writer

The San Diego State University Publications Authority Board Wednesday approved a new advertising policy for the Daily Aztec, ending a one-month ban on abortion service advertising by the paper.

The ban began in September, after Editor in Chief Jon Petersen announced that the paper would no longer accept abortion ads.

Petersen said abortion ads would violate the paper's written policy to not accept advertising that serves "primarily to oppress the rights of a certain group as determined by the editor in chief," because abortion takes "the life of an unborn human being."

Petersen's ban on abortion ads raised objections from SDSU students. On Sept. 19, the SDSU Women's Resource Center held a rally to protest the Daily Aztec's advertising policy. The rally reportedly drew 200 people.

Womancare, a local health clinic, withdrew its ads from the paper and urged other advertisers to take action if Petersen's ban was allowed to continue.

Daily Aztec Account Executive Brian Busta said some advertisers had withdrawn their ads as a result of the abortion ad ban.

The Publications Authority Board (PAB), which acts as the Daily Aztec's publisher, on Aug. 23 declined to approve the advertising policy upon which Petersen drew his authority to ban abortion ads.

The PAB later set up a committee of Daily Aztec staffmembers to form a new advertising policy. This committee, by a vote of 5-2 on Sept. 22, amended the paper's advertising policy to include the word "legal."

Criteria Set For New UCs

Andrew Klingeler
Daily Californian

The UC Board of Regents last week established rules for choosing sites for the three new campuses scheduled for construction in the next decade.

A report on the criteria for evaluation of possible UC campus sites developed by the Bechtel-SRI International consulting group was adopted at the Sept. 15 meeting of the UC Regents at UCLA.

Complete copies of the report, with detailed standards for physical site evaluation, should be available within ten days, University spokesperson Rick Malaspina said yesterday.

The decision-making process is planned to continue until 1991, Malaspina said. In October, the Regents are expected to choose 50-60 of the most promising sites for consideration and, by 1991, university officials will have selected three final campus locations from the initial options.

"The greatest cost will be in the consulting fees and the work they're doing," Malaspina said. "Right now we have $500,000 in

College Essay Contest Announced

Vector Marketing Corporation announced an essay contest with scholarship monies totaling $3,000 for winning entries.

The contest is open to both part-time and full-time undergraduates, enrolled at recognized colleges and universities across the country. Students are to write a 500 word essay on the following topic: "Beyond Your GPA: What More Does It Take To Be Successful After College?"

The winning essay contestant will receive $1,000 in scholarship monies. Two second prize winners will receive $500 each, and four runners-up will be awarded $250 each in cash prizes.

Entries will be judged on the basis of overall writing style and content, in addition to a demonstrated ability to support the criterion chosen for the essay.

Copy must be typed, double-spaced and should not exceed 550 words. All entries should include return address and phone number along with the student's class year and major.

Winners will be notified by mail no later than Dec. 15, 1989. The deadline for entries is Dec. 1, 1989. Entries should be sent to Vector Marketing Corporation at 1260 East Woodland Ave., Springfield, PA 19064.

World Affairs Series Continues

The World Affairs Council of San Diego and UCSD Extension continue their series on "Learning and Teaching World Affairs" being held Thursday evenings through Nov. 9.

All sessions meet at the Institute of the Americas, 10111 North Torrey Pines Road from 7:00 to 8:30 p.m.

The Oct. 12 speaker will be Ambassador (Ret.) Paul Boeker, president, Institute of the Americas. His topic will be "International Drug Traffic: An Unwinnable War?"

Huttenback Strikes Back

Former UCSB Chancellor Robert Huttenback, convicted in 1988 of embezzling over $100,000 from the University, was in court again last Monday, hoping to receive a court order forcing the UC Regents to lift his suspension from teaching and restore his salary.

Robert Gerstein, a former UCLA law professor and counsel for Huttenback, said Tuesday he was optimistic Huttenback would be allowed to return to teaching, or at least have his pay reinstated.

Huttenback and Gerstein argued that the University did not afford the former chancellor due process in imposing the suspension and terminating his pay, because Huttenback's criminal convictions are still under appeal.

"I think it went very well," Gerstein said. The judge... was seriously thinking about the argument."

According to Gerstein, Santa Barbara County Superior Court Judge Ronald Stevens said he would reach a decision within the next few days.

Huttenback said last month he believed "the law is on our side," but added that the case has become a "highly political issue."

Huttenback was suspended with full pay by Chancellor Barbara Uehling in Sept. 1988, one day after his conviction. Huttenback was also convicted of five felony counts of tax evasion for failing to report the embezzled funds as income. All convictions are currently being appealed, but that case is not expected to be heard for several months.

Last July, the Regents stripped Huttenback of his $84,000 salary and said he would be dismissed entirely should his convictions be upheld.

Berkeley Protesters Smoke Pot During Demonstration

Hundreds of dope-smoking demonstrators were cheered on last week at a rally held at UC Berkeley to protest federal anti-drug pledges.

A group calling itself Defend Our Personal Ethics (DOPE) urged students not to sign the statements required of those receiving federal financial assistance college grants.

"We're going to beat George Bush on the war on drugs," said a 23-year-old sophomore who would not identify himself.

During the demonstration, attended by about 2,000 people, an eight-foot mock "joint" made of paper and wire was set ablaze in front of the University administration building.

Many of the students also joined in sharing 500 marijuana cigarettes that were distributed at the beginning of the hour-long lunchtime rally. There were no arrests.

Some 3 million students nationwide receive the so-called Pell Grants. As part of the Bush administration's war on drugs, students receiving the grants are required to sign an oath stating they will not use or make illegal drugs.

Career Help Offered For Liberal Arts Graduating Seniors

The Career Services Center is sponsoring a five-session workshop for liberal arts seniors who are graduating this year and still don't know what job to pursue. By the time students complete Senior Liberal Arts Training for Employment (SLATE), they will be ready to search for a job.

In the SLATE program, students will learn about job market trends, generate career options, draft a marketable resume, practice effective interviewing skills and examine the pros and cons of job search strategies. SLATE begins Nov. 1, but students must sign up in advance. The program is first come, first serve.

More Treatment for Heart Attack Victims

Kevin Knopf
Science Editor, UCSF Synapse

Doctors may begin to treat coronary heart disease with a new class of compounds called lazaroids. The compounds are currently undergoing testing in animal studies, and the results appear promising. In animal models of a heart attack, the compounds appear to decrease the amount of damage suffered by the heart muscle, which will ultimately preserve more of the heart's function.

A heart attack is caused by a loss of blood flow to the heart muscle itself. This loss can be caused by a plaque, a "plug" in the coronary artery, and preventive measures are aimed at reducing the risk of acquiring these plaques. If the plaque grows too big and cuts off circulation to the heart, a heart attack can result. Loss of blood flow causes damage to the heart by reducing the amount of oxygen delivered to the heart.

Drugs have been designed to dissolve these plaques during a heart attack, but a significant problem is that when blood flow is restored to the heart tissue, additional damage can result to the tissue. This is called "reperfusion injury" and is thought to be due to free-radicals that are generated during reflow. These free radicals are actually chemically unstable oxygen molecules.

The experimental compounds seem to transform the free-radicals into normal oxygen, which has no damaging effects to the heart tissue. Ideally the lazaroids could be used at the same time as clot-dissolving drugs to minimize the damage caused by heart attacks. Human trials are scheduled to begin in about a year. If these compounds are shown to work, they may be used in other areas where reperfusion injury can be a problem, such as in certain types of surgery.

AZTEC: Advertising Policy Revised

The new policy, which was approved by the PAB by a vote of 6-3 Wednesday, states that advertising may not serve "primarily to oppress the legal rights of a certain group." Because abortion is legal, the paper is now free to accept abortion ads.

Petersen said he was "disappointed" with the new policy, but accepted it.

He added that PAB decided that the Daily Aztec advertising policy committee will meet later this academic year to review the paper's policy to accept phone sex and research paper service ads. However, Petersen said he does not expect the paper's advertising policy to change.

City Editor Adrian Vore said most Daily Aztec staffers have been apathetic concerning the abortion ad controversy.

"There was no reaction [to the new ad policy]... The few good writers are just concerned about turning their stories in," he said. In regard to the new ad policy, Womancare spokesperson Julie Ulrich said, "We're happy about it, and we're going to put our ads back in the paper."

Fighting Words

A Disgraceful Policy

The university is the only institution in Western society whose business it is to search for and transmit the truth regardless of all competing or conflicting pressures and demands; pressures for immediate usefulness, for social approval, pressures to serve the special interests of government, a class, a professional group, a race, a faith, even a nation.

— Henry Steele Commager

The new UC policy against "fighting words" is a disgrace. UC President David P. Gardner has instituted a policy defining fighting words as those which are "inherently likely to provoke a violent reaction whether or not they actually do so." The penalty for using fighting words can be as severe as dismissal from the University.

Gardner attempts to clarify this policy by adding that "such words include, but are not limited to, those terms widely recognized to be derogatory reference to race, ethnicity, religion, sex, sexual orientation, disability and other personal characteristics." This only serves to muddy the waters further, however.

This policy necessitates tremendously subjective judgements by campus administrators. Just what are "fighting words"? What constitutes insensitivity? People from different ideologies would define fighting words very differently. Jack Kemp and Ted Kennedy would obviously differ strongly on whether a particular expression would be considered "fighting words," or would fall into that vague category of "insensitivity."

Would burning a flag and screaming anti-American slogans in the Price Center plaza be acceptable? This would certainly be likely to "provoke a violent reaction," so it seems that the UC's definition of what constitutes free expression is much narrower than that of some conservatives on the Supreme Court.

A column in the Los Angeles Times pointed out that the "heavy stuff: hazing, threats, prolonged harassment, physical intimidation" is already covered by the student conduct code and local, state and federal laws.

Last year in the Guardian, there were several letters which argued that affirmative action is reverse racism, and is thus wrong. These letters provoked violent reactions, including letters accusing the writers of being Nazis. If the letters were written with this new policy in effect, the writers could face punishments as severe as expulsion from the University.

Is this what we really want? The book University in Motion, a loving look at UCSD from Oceanids, the UCSD campus women's organization, quotes former Supreme Court Justice Louis Brandeis's definition of a university as "truly a seat of learning where research is pursued, books written, and the creative instinct aroused, encouraged and developed in its faculty and students."

But if the merits of a policy such as affirmative action cannot be freely debated at a university, where should it be debated? Universities should not be reactionary -- instead, they should serve as the wellspring of new viewpoints and ideas.

There's no question some of the activities this policy is trying to stop -- such as racist, anti-semitic or sexist harassment -- are reprehensible. But a university must be committed to the ideal of free expression, of the free interchange of competing ideas. Some of these ideas will be offensive, but it is a truism that protection of free speech exists to defend offensive ideas, because non-offensive expression does not need protection. Suppressing ideas which encourage offensive behavior may seem defensible, but the inevitable effect will be an atmosphere where good ideas are not expressed because of the fear of disciplinary action.

Those who believe in the ideal of a university as a marketplace of ideas should consider this new policy much more horrifying than any expression the policy is designed to suppress.

Greeks Are Elitist Pigs

Editor:
 This letter is in regards to the "Close-up" in the Oct. 2 Guardian.

Are you kidding, or what? Do you think that someone just said, "Hey, let's pretend that frat boys are bigoted, chauvanistic, small minded adolescents, and everyone will believe us?"

If this were the case, you good ole boys would have had plenty of opportunities to redeem your not so honorable image. Stereotypes don't just start themselves.

Fraternities and other grandfa-lions fragment campuses into cliques and castes. They detract from the diversity, individuality and maturity of the student body, and attempt to substitute Greek values such as homogeneity, elitism and inebriation.

If you're going to be elitist pigs, then be proud about it and wave your snotty noses about, but don't pretend you're a bunch of non-sexist humanitarians, philanthropists and philosophers.

At least have the balls to say and do what you believe, and don't expect that no one will notice a double standard.

Mike Newton

Dangerous Censorship

Editor:
 I was deeply dismayed after reading about the new amendment to the UC Student Conduct Policy regarding "fighting words" in which it states that a student may be subject to disciplinary actions for uttering, "Such words [which] include, but are not limited to, those widely recognized to be derogatory references to race, ethnicity, religion, sex, sexual orientation, disability and other personal characteristics."

I have just returned from a year abroad and am a bit upset (no, pissed off) to find the national trend in this country sweeping towards a paranoid insecurity and a passive acceptance of censorship.

I read in foreign newspapers how the U.S. Supreme Court had modified Roe vs. Wade, rolled back the timetables for blacks and other minorities in civil rights issues, and I returned just in time to hear about the NEA (National Endowment for the Arts) uproar and the "if you bum the flag you are not patriotic" issue.

Now I get back to campus and during the first meeting of one of my short fiction courses, the professor tells us that we may not write anything racist, biased or sexist. I believe that, indeed, all those "ists" are not good and that I would not propose any ideas propagating that, but to say that one may not write about them is just plain wrong (all Bill of Rights amendments aside).

And then one week later to read that if I call someone an "asshole" (or possibly just by writing it here) and then that person attacks me, I may now be kicked out of the university. Or if someone is offended and attacks me for uttering the words "Christian" or even "four eyes," I could also be subject to disciplinary action.

I know it may be a little difficult to take this all seriously, and I do believe there are much more pressing issues to be addressed than who's calling who names, but unfortunately our administration has decided to spend our money on this. Any law, rule or

Inaccuracies in Story

Editor:
 I was most disturbed by the inaccuracies in the article entitled "A.S. Allocates Money For Sexual Awareness Week" in the Oct. 5 issue of the Guardian. It would appear that the two most important "facts" of the article were wrong.

The author of the bill is Kathy Oh, not Kathy Ho, and the total amount of money allocated was $1,500 not $1,570. Additionally, the article contained a fairly substantial misquote. Although I am confident that these mistakes were not intentional, I sincerely hope that the Guardian is more responsible in the future.

statute must be logically formed and defined. Maybe if the administration, or anyone else for that matter, could please define for me the parameters of "other personal characteristics" or "widely recognized" I would be very thankful.

It is scary to hear about national statistics which indicate that racism is on the rise once again (some even saying that it never even went away), but taping someone's mouth closed or tying their hands behind their backs does not solve the problem or change the person's mind. Only through individual negative response and education will someone change their views. Censorship, especially at the university, is a dangerous step in the wrong direction.

BENSON

The First Father: Living in TV Land With George Bush

NEW YORK — For me, understanding politics comes down to basics. Elaborate theories about public opinion and endlessly detailed polling surveys about why people think what they think, are just not as useful to me as more commonplace tools of understanding.

For example, I don't rely on surveys to tell me that Vice President Dan is still struggling to establish his reputation as a serious figure. I simply note that Jay Leno, David Letterman and Johnny Carson still use him as a semi-official punchline in their jokes.

And even the CBS sit-com "Murphy Brown" features a Quayle joke of the week. "I was a day late on the Quayle nomination," the bartender admits to Murphy Brown, "but I attribute that to a case of psychological denial."

When the jokesters, with their incredibly well-tuned antennae, start to lay off Quayle, then you'll know he's made it.

I don't rely on attitudinal surveys to figure out whether big business may be in for another round as one of America's favorite villains.

What catches my attention is a recent issue of a "Superman" comic. There I find that Lex Luthor, longtime mad scientist-nemesis of Superman, has become: a corporate raider, taking over research companies, the better to discover means of crippling the Man of Steel.

And when I look at how presidents connect with the American people, I try very hard to figure out how they fit into the American family—literally. That is, I try to see what role they play in what might be considered the extended family of American politics.

For instance, Dwight Eisenhower could be our grandfather, a bit long in the tooth now, but much revered by our parents and aunts and uncles for the glorious deeds he did before we were born.

John Kennedy would be our older brother, the romantic figure who taught us a father out of a very specific time and place in our culture.

He's the father from the American TV universe of the late 1950s and early 1960s, a father who moved somewhere between the well-meaning fumbling of Stu Erwin ("Life With Father") and Chester A.

Riley ("The Life of Riley") to the competent, easygoing certainties of Jim Anderson of Ozzie and Harriet"). He's clearly well-intentioned, loves his kids, has no particular passion or commitment to a cause or a battle, but simply means to get through life with as little disruption as possible.

Those dads never dealt with the world outside of the Sycamore Street home. The big issues were whether Rick would summon up his courage to ask the girl to the prom, whether Chip would get an allowance, whether Kitten felt jealous because everybody was proud of the way Bud had souped up that old jalopy.

Sure reminds me of Washington today, where the most notable reality is the complete, utter absence of any real political passion, where flag-burning has to be brought out of the American attic as a real concern, even though nobody's burned a flag for years.

It's the perfect time for a First Father, who will not so much lead as preside, with a reassuring personality, a sometimes goofy way with words, but with an undeniable sense of decency.

And — if you believe those polls — as long as Dad puts food on the table, gas in the car, and keeps the burglars away from the front door, nobody's about to sue for divorce.

how to tune a carburetor, throw a football, catch a fish. The cheerleaders from high school were always nice to us, hoping we'd introduce them to Jack.

Ronald Reagan was our favorite uncle, a man who'd come in from the road with a new joke, a toy for the kids, and a way of spinning tales that had us mesmerized. And if some of the tales were stretched, well, who really cared?

So who is George Bush? I think now I know. George Bush is the First Father, but

A Casualty of Academia

Editor:
One can easily say congratulations to Bard-Alan Finlan. The University has evolved into a huge lumbering animal of bureaucratic lethargy. Nick Aguilar is one of the most prime and shining examples. Depending on your circumstance and Nick's involvement, Aguilar is either totally in the way or cannot get out of the way fast enough.

My own experience is that I went to school with Nick—I know him better than most. One of Nick's best tricks is to put his tail between his legs and hide in his office. I got involved in a serious dispute with Hugh Mehan and the Teacher Education Program (TEP) about five years ago. While Nick knew and subsequently said to me that Mehan was very much out of bounds in his legal maneuvering, Nick didn't do a damn thing. At best, he stood behind all and any of the regulations that covered his butt. He absolutely did nothing (!) to help the student's interest. He was too busy dancing through the Policy and Procedure Manual to address the lousy deal I got at TEP.

The crime is that if we approached our responsibilities like Nick and Joe do, we'd be in jail. The place up here on the mesa is too big now. Not enough indians and too many chiefs—the adage applies.

Nick is a caring, sensitive man deep in his soul. The vicious tragedy is that if you stay tangled up long enough in this academic madness and lose touch with the realness of the world-at-large you evolve into a full-blown asshole.

GUARDIAN Close-up

A Short Career as a Second-hand Poacher

By CATHERINE DILLE, News Editor

Some of the most graphic and disturbing media images to enter American homes this summer via the six o'clock news were the pictures of dead and dying elephants and footage of the Kenyan police destroying thousands of tons of illegally poached African ivory. The millions of Americans who watch the evening news over dinner were suddenly face to face with the gory origins of their piano keys and cameo necklaces.

Illegally poached ivory became the cause celebre of Jimmy Stewart as well as the United States Congress which, with amazing speed for the lumbering bureaucracy that it is, enacted laws forbidding importation of African ivory almost immediately. Who then, with every news camera in the nation focused on the plight of the hapless elephant, would have the audacity to buy ivory or worse still, to wear ivory? Amazingly enough, people do. I met these second hand poachers, even became one, this past summer.

Right about the time when the media crackdown on ivory poachers began, I started my summer job as a salesperson at a jewelry counter. This wasn't my first experience with retail sales; I've sold everything from pastries to western sculpture, so jewelry was relatively easy. I just had to stand there and give my spiel, "Okay, right here we have the marcasite and sterling silver reproductions from the 1850's, this green stone is malachite, the Unikite is from South Africa and the hand-picked, knotted ivory beads with the hand-carved Netsuke are from . . ." I know they say a job is a job, but I really felt bad about pushing the ivory. I just sort of mumbled that part of the sales pitch. But every time I did, some lady would ask what the white beads were made of that would go perfect with the sweater she just bought. And when I told her, she would inevitably look at me as though I had slaughtered the elephant myself and say "Oh no, I wouldn't care to look at those, I think it's just sick what they are doing to the elephants."

I thought it was sick too, even though the ivory that I was selling was from Asia and had already been in the country when the trade moratorium was passed. I tried talking to my boss, but she had no qualms about selling ivory, in fact she found that her sales had been up since the moratorium, "I like the stuff, it wears with anything winter or spring. Besides," she said in her Charleston accent, "the elephants are dead already anyways."

To make things worse, I received a commission on what I sold. So the day I made an $800 sale on mostly ivory, I wasn't sure whether to be pleased that most of the stuff was gone or embarrassed that I had sold it. What was I supposed to do? Refuse to sell it on ethical grounds? Quit? Maybe I should have. At any rate, would it be really hypocritical, or just ironic to send my $40 commission to the World Wildlife Federation?

"The UCSD Guardian Close-up" appears each Monday, written by a different staffer each week.

CAMPUS: UC Closer To Deciding On New Locations

our budget" for research on proposed new campuses.

The UC Board of Regents also considered a set of preliminary academic planning guidelines that stress a "need for a broad array of undergraduate and graduate programs to the doctoral level in the letters, arts, sciences" and research programs.

"In contrast to the site guidelines, the academic rules will not be of immediate importance in choosing a location, Malaspina said.

"Right now they only have general application," he said. "They're only general lines of thinking that you'd want to apply to a campus anywhere.

It could influence the location of a campus and what that campus becomes," Malaspina said. "I think we'll see that when the list of 50 to 60 is narrowed down."

Bechtel is researching possible sites regardless of municipal proposals, Malaspina said.

"We've asked areas of the state not to submit formal site proposals because that would be costly and time consuming and might raise expectations," he said.

Despite the University's professed lack of interest, several cities have submitted "letters of interest" or similar items to the Regents.

"We sent many things, including a very comprehensive video on Redding" as a locale for post-secondary education, said Lou Gerard, executive of the Redding Chamber of Commerce.

By June of this year the Regents had already received about 30 letters of interest, according to Teresa LaRocca, economic development specialist for Palm Springs, which hopes to be a site candidate.

Gerard said that many cities had openly expressed interest in a new campus, including Eureka, Santa Rosa, Marysville, Ukiah and Yreka.

LaRocca and Gerard said their cities would be likely to donate land in the event that they were chosen.

"We would certainly be looking for sites of potential donation," LaRocca said.

Gerard would not guarantee that Redding would donate land to the University, but he said that the city would follow historical practice.

"Historically, the University generally has been presented with land. One might say we are a site-rich area," he said.

The informal competition between cities is not groundless. Public support, including expressions of support by local governments and civic groups, is one of the preliminary site criteria that will be sought by the Regents in late May.

A Night in the Life of a Campus Police Officer

By RENEE LEWIS
Contributing Writer

You may not know this, but there is a team of dedicated professionals on campus who are actively working to ensure the safety of all students at UCSD. They are the members of the University of California Police Department (UCPD).

Wanting to get a better idea of what an officer's job entails, I spent about four and a half hours riding along with UC Police Officer Jeff Cox last Wednesday night.

Looking around the interior of the patrol car, I felt a bit apprehensive at first, especially when I noticed the large shotgun in its stand right next to me. Officer Cox assured me, however, that so far he has never had to use it and, to the best of his knowledge, there has never been a shoot-out on campus in the history of UCSD.

We started out the evening by patrolling the campus and the area by the glider port. Officer Cox, I learned, has been on the campus police force for three months and was a member of the San Diego Police Department before that. I also discovered that he is a part-time student here at UCSD. Cox was a full-time student at Revelle College in 1980 for about three years. He returned to school a year ago to finish up his degree in political science and has only two classes left before he accomplishes that goal.

According to Cox, the campus police department is composed of one chief, one lieutenant, five sergeants and roughly twenty police officers. In addition, he said, "there [are] a number of CSO's [Community Service Officers] and they provide the escorts. [They] are all students here at UCSD. Each dorm area has a security guard that works there at night and . . . gets off at 3:00 a.m. There are [also] parking reps that work during the night . . . and the day."

To become an officer of the UCPD, a person must be a graduate of a police academy in California. Most of the police officers at UCSD, said Cox, have also had a great deal of experience prior to coming here, either on the San Diego Police Department (SDPD), in the Sheriff's Department, or in another local police department.

Cox, who is on duty from 3:00 p.m. until 11:00 p.m., said that his job as a UC police officer entails "a whole spectrum of police duties," such as answering radio calls from burglar alarms, controlling loud parties and domestic disturbances, getting medical attention for injured students and patrolling campus both by car and on foot.

Occasionally, the officers are assigned to special details as well. Earlier that day, for example, Cox and his co-workers were called on to "maintain the perimeter" of the Institute of the Americas while Costa Rican President and Nobel Prize Laureate Oscar Arias was being presented with the Institute's Award for Democracy and Peace.

While many of the responsibilities are the same, Officer Cox said that the SDPD and UCPD have very different atmospheres. "Here we aren't as concerned with making a lot of arrests. Instead of making an arrest we might refer [the offender] to their provost . . . Everything here doesn't have to be from an enforcement standpoint," Cox explained.

As a UC police officer, Cox said that he likes having time to talk with people on campus, instead of "just bouncing from one radio call to the next." At UCSD, he also gets a chance to do more service-oriented jobs than he did on the SDPD, such as letting professors into their offices when they lock themselves out.

Cox also pointed out several other aspects of his job that he finds particularly enjoyable.

"One . . . nice thing [about the job]," he said, "is that you get to do a lot of foot patrol. . . just cruise around and check things out. They actually encourage that here. You're not trapped in your patrol car."

Another, continued Cox, is "that you do something different every day. Every day you don't know exactly what's going to come up. That aspect of it is kind of challenging."

The UC Police Department's jurisdiction encompasses everything within a one-mile radius of the campus, including the Scripps Institute of Oceanography, and the La Jolla del Sol and Mesa Apartments. While patrolling this property, we were called to a code 1154 at the south entrance of building 301 in the Matthews complex. I wondered, at hearing such an impressive-sounding number, if I should be worried for my safety. I soon learned, however, that in this case, an 1154 meant that a man had locked himself out of his office in the University Public Relations building and we had to let him in.

After assisting the man, Cox entered what had occurred into his Officer's Daily Activity Report, in which he is, literally, required by the Department to account for every minute he spends on duty.

At about 8:45 p.m., we were called to back up another unit at the Undergraduate Library. Librarians had called in a complaint that a man was talking to himself and disturbing students around him. After arriving at the scene, I observed while Cox and another officer escorted the man from the building. Upon questioning him, the officers discovered that he was a registered sex offender who had been in trouble with the UC Police before.

A field interview report was then filled out which stated that the man, who had no legitimate business at UCSD, was required by law to remain off campus for 72 hours. If he returned before then, he would be in violation of the penal code and subject to arrest.

Along with several other units, we were then called to respond to an accident on Lebon Drive in front of the La Jolla del Sol apartment complex. I held on tightly to the arm rest as we sped to the scene, lights flashing and siren screaming. A woman, who had been driving on the wrong side of the street, had collided head-on with another car, leaving its driver injured. Fortunately, the man was conscious and the injury, though painful, was not serious. I sat in the police car to block traffic, while Cox interviewed witnesses and waited for medical help to arrive.

We spent the remainder of the See POLICE, page 11

La Jolla Playhouse Presents Award-winning Productions

By MARK BUBIEN
Contributing Writer

Many students pass the La Jolla Playhouse daily as they drive to school along La Jolla Village Drive. A theater with high goals, the Playhouse is more than another landmark.

The La Jolla Playhouse was originally formed in 1941 by Gregory Peck, Dorothy McGuire and Mel Ferrer. The board of directors suspended operation of the theater from 1964 to 1983 while it planned the theater's future. In 1983, it reopened at UCSD with the goal of establishing a world class theater operation.

The Playhouse is not without its share of acclaim. Since 1983, it has received 125 awards. In addition, Broadway productions of plays which were premiered on the UCSD campus by the Playhouse have received some of the country's most prestigious awards.

Big River, a 1984 musical about Huckleberry Finn with its score written by Roger Miller, received seven Tony awards in 1985. These included a best director award for Des McAnuff, the art director for the Playhouse.

production about Soviet and American nuclear arms reduction talks, which won the American Theater Critics Award for best new play in 1988. It was also nominated for a Pulitzer prize that same year.

Even though the La Jolla Playhouse produces award-winning plays, it is suffering financial difficulties, according to a spokesperson who spoke under the condition of anonymity.

The Playhouse has a season of only 32 weeks, but incurs overhead costs throughout the year—overhead which the season's earnings do not fully cover.

evening patrolling UCSD and pulling over an occasional campus traffic violator. Cox said that expired registrations, broken tail lights, and other minor violations give officers probable cause to stop someone who, in their opinion, looks suspicious.

Having heard all the stories in the news about police officers who are shot or killed during routine traffic stops, I felt a certain degree of anxiety each time we pulled someone over.

Cox said that, while he is always aware that something like that could happen, he doesn't spend his time worrying about it. For that reason, however, explained Cox, a second officer always comes to cover the one making the stop. If an officer is not comfortable about the people he/she has stopped, he/she can wait for the second officer to arrive before approaching them.

Before we parted ways, Cox had some advice for students at UCSD. He urged them to take precautions against crime and not to think that nothing can happen to them here. "Crime does occur on this campus," he said.

"If [students] are victims of a crime or if they see something that they think is suspicious, they really should call it in because we can get here within just a few minutes, generally," Cox continued. "Then, we can be the judge of whether it was silly to call it in or not. A lot of times, something will happen, they'll see a suspicious person, [and], for whatever reason, will decide not to call it in until a few hours later. By that time, the person is gone."

During the hours I spent observing Cox, I learned many things, not the least important of which was that, contrary to the image portrayed by the media, police work is not one dramatic event or shoot-out after another.

Theaters

with the UCSD Department of Theatre. The theatre department uses the Center during most of the school year, and the Playhouse uses it during summer months.

The shared usage arose from the agreement between the University and the La Jolla Playhouse Board of Directors which established the Playhouse's residence on campus. According to the spokesperson, the Playhouse donated $3.25 million to the University, and it was determined by UCSD and the Playhouse that the facility would be shared by the two theater groups.

The spokesperson noted that another source of the Playhouse's problems is the one-year delay in the originally scheduled 1990 completion of the Weiss Forum, a new 400-seat theater to be built adjacent to the Mandell Weiss Center. With the completion of this and a planned third theater, the Playhouse would have the ability to produce plays year-round.

In order to keep functioning, the Playhouse has begun a community fundraising campaign.

"To broaden our base of support, we've gone public to the community to say, 'We need your help,'" the spokesperson said. "We have set a goal to raise $500,000 by December of 1989 in order to ensure a 1990 season."

The current base of support for the Playhouse is supplied evenly from both ticket sales and outside donations, the spokesperson explained. These donations include charity from individuals in the community as well as grants from corporations.

The Playhouse was recently awarded a $250,000 challenge grant by the National Endowment for the Arts. Over a three-year period, the grant produces a three-to-one dollar match: for every three dollars earned, the grant donates one dollar, up to a maximum of $250,000.

The Playhouse has also received grants from the California Arts Council, the city of San Diego, the county of San Diego, as well as several corporations including

AT&T and NBC.

In addition to providing entertainment, the Playhouse offers academic opportunities for students of theater. All students seeking a Master of Fine Arts degree from the UCSD Department of Theatre are required to fulfill a ten-week residency with the La Jolla Playhouse.

Two Playhouse members also sit on the Department of Theatre faculty.

The current production of Macbeth, opening for preview October 10, is a collaboration between the Playhouse and the Department of Theatre, and includes seven student actors, two student assistant directors, and one student production assistant. Both the lighting designer and costume designer are faculty members.

In order to encourage students to attend La Jolla Playhouse productions, the theater offers student discounts for every play. There is also a "student rush" which allows students to buy tickets at half price one hour prior to curtain.

Armstrong also pointed out that the next two weeks will be crucial in figuring the Tritons' chances of making the regionals in early November. The Tritons will be traveling to the Grand Canyon College Tournament this weekend to compete with Colorado College, Howard University, and host Grand Canyon College.

The following week the Tritons have an opportunity to fatten their record with three consecutive games against local Division III opponents: Claremont, Cal State San Bernardino and Occidental.

The Poets may have gotten the better of this header, but the Tritons finished head and shoulders above Whittier in this contest.

In the Biola contest, Allison Hensleit's 12 kills led the Tritons to a 15-7, 15-9, 14-16, 15-5 victory.

It was Hensleit again the following night, as her 13 kills led UCSD (15-9) to a 15-10, 15-12, 15-5 sweep over host Cal State San Bernardino (14-1).

The Tritons host William and Mary University (Virginia) Friday.

A Good Idea Can Make It To The Stars

"No matter what your age or experience."

Linnie Haynesworth, Senior Staff Engineer, Space Communications Division

TRW will be on campus October 25. See your college placement office to sign-up.

At TRW, we're in the business of making history. Taking large scale projects from impossible to possible to yesterday's news. And you can play a key role. Right now. All you need is talent, energy, and enthusiasm.

At our campus-like facilities, you'll pursue technological excellence alongside the industry's most accomplished professionals. And you'll work with sophisticated equipment on next-generation satellite, earth/space communications, advanced avionics, or innovative software technologies.

In addition, TRW's matrix management system complements your strengths by letting you choose your own career path. This way, you'll have a career. Not a compromise.

For engineering, computer science, math or physics majors, it's never too soon to talk with TRW. We'll tell you about opportunities in microelectronics, high energy lasers, large software systems, communications, scientific spacecraft, and many more interesting projects.

If you're unable to see us on campus, send your resume to: TRW College Relations, E2/4000, Dept. FC, One Space Park, Redondo Beach, CA 90278.

Tritons Defeat Whittier; USIU

Men's Soccer Back on Track

By JOHN ASUNCION
Contributing Writer

The Whittier College Poets came to UCSD hoping to write a rhyme of victory over the defending Division III National Champion Triton men's soccer team.

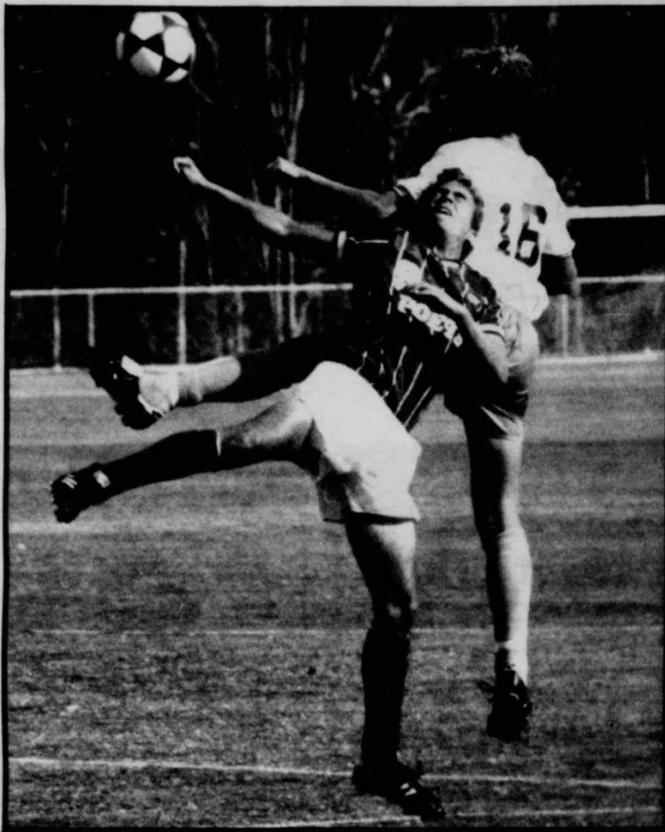

But the Poets were not even able to pick up their feet — let alone their pens — as their defense folded in the second half and wrote off an easy 6-2 victory for the Tritons on Friday afternoon at North Campus Stadium.

The win was a sweet one for UCSD, which had been struggling after losing three of its previous four contests. Yesterday, the Tritons won their second game in a row with a 1-0 overtime victory over USIU on the road. UCSD's record is now 7-3-2.

In the Whittier game, the Tritons did not begin to dominate until the second half, as they held a tight 2-1 lead at halftime. But after Chris Hanssen and Mike Bradley scored successive goals only one minute and 41 seconds apart, there was little doubt as to who was going to control the remainder of the game.

Bradley's goal came on an assist from junior Chris Jones, who dished out a total of three on the afternoon.

With a 4-1 UCSD lead, Shane Sigler's goal for Whittier on a direct kick which deflected off a defender meant little to the Tritons. UCSD responded with two more goals by forwards Carrick Brewster and Scott Rommel. Rommel, the team leader in goals, scored twice on the day.

The four-goal second half outburst by the Tritons was in direct contrast with their play in the first half, where they failed to convert on a number of scoring opportunities. Still, Rommel and sophomore Mike Alberts managed to convert, giving the Tritons their 2-1 halftime edge.

"We're in the middle of putting together a team that is rebuilding from last year's club," Triton Head Coach Derek Armstrong said. "Right now we're in the process of finding out the strengths and weaknesses of our club."

Triton Cross Country Dominates Biola Invite

By PHIL GRUEN
Sports Editor

Merrell Hora, the top runner on the UCSD men's cross country team, had a tender knee when the Tritons competed at the Biola Invitational.

Denise McFayden, number one on the women's team, was forced to drop out of the race after turning her ankle.

So, without their two best runners, it would be logical to figure that the Tritons had problems heading into the meet.

Logical, yes. Actually, not at all.

The UCSD men's and women's cross country teams — even without their top two runners — put together sterling performances to win their respective divisions at the Biola Invitational on Saturday.

The Triton men's team, paced by Mike Fox and Roger Webb who wound up first and second in the meet, respectively, finished atop Division I with 19 points. Cal State Fullerton placed second with 43 points, and Pepperdine was third with 91.

USD won Division II with a 60 point performance. In all, there were 11 colleges and 90 runners competing in the meet.

The Triton men dominated all aspects of the race as they placed five finishers in the top 10 and 10 overall in the top 18. Fox and Webb controlled the race from the start and finished atop the pack with only one second separating them.

Eric Kinney, who finished fifth overall, and Grant Walkup, who finished eighth, had their best races of the season according to Head Coach Mark Stanforth.

The women's team was equally impressive, and stepped in when McFayden — in addition to Sabrina Jensen, Laura Peck, and Karen Longyear — were forced to step out because of injury and other ailments.

The women's team, with 38 points, finished well ahead of second place Cal State Northridge (73 points). San Diego State was third with 80, Pepperdine finished fourth with 92, UNLV was fifth with 106 and Cal State Fullerton wound up sixth with 117. Azusa Pacific won Division II with 59 points. The race included 16 colleges and over 100 runners.

Michelle Conlay led the Triton finishers with an 18:27 time and a second place finish overall, one second behind leader Genevieve Graff from Christ College of Irvine.

Sharon Rockett placed 16th and Yolanda Torres 19th for the Tritons.

McFayden, Jensen, Peck, Longyear and Hora should all be ready to compete next week in the Cal Poly San Luis Obispo Invitational.

PHIL'S ANALYSIS...I rarely do this. Rarely. In fact, this kills me. But I'm just going to have to go with an L.A. team for lack of a better alternative. Actually, I'd much rather make another baseball playoff prediction, but it would be too late by the time the paper came out. Besides, nobody would believe me if I told them I said Rickey Henderson was going to be the ALCS MVP before the playoffs started, so why mention it now? But, oh well, I guess I'll resort to another Monday night pick. Why am I going to go with an L.A. team? God knows — but maybe it's because the Raiders recently hired Art Shell as head coach. Shell was a true Oakland Raider — an offensive lineman on a team which everybody feared and respected. Maybe he can do something with this floundering and pansy-like L.A. team which has lost every bit of that ferocious demeanor it used to boast up north. Maybe he won't be able to improve this team until it returns to Oakland. Who knows. But for now, as I grit my teeth, PHIL says...

Nine in a Row for Women's Soccer; Women's Volleyball Wins Two

Women's Soccer

Felicia Faro scored 18 minutes into the second half to lift the Tritons to a 1-0 win over Cal Poly Pomona Saturday night.

The win ran the Tritons unbeaten streak to nine this year — but perhaps more impressively, it also ran their shutout streak to nine. UCSD has outscored its opponents 43-0 this year and has won seven of its games on the road.

The Tritons, with each successive shutout, continue to add to their school record of consecutive shutouts. Last year, they strung together two stretches of six consecutive shutouts.

Women's Volleyball

The Tritons, who struggled for a brief period a week ago, have rebounded to win their last three in a row — including two this weekend over both Biola and Cal State San Bernardino on the road.
